estate. Spectator, N^o. 475.

After having been present in public debates, he was teased by his mother to inform her of what had passed. Addison.

We system-makers can sustain
The thesis, which you grant was plain;
And with remarks and comments tease ye,
In case the thing before was easy. Prior.

TEASEL. n. f. [teapl, Saxon; dipsacus, Lat.] A plant.

The flower of the teasel hath no proper calyx, but leaves representing the perianthium encompassing the bottom of the head: the little flowers which are produced singly from between the scales, are collected into an head somewhat like a bee-hive; these are succeeded by longish four-cornered seeds:
of the species are three: one is called carduus fullonum, and is of singular use in raising the knap upon woollen cloth. Miller.

TEASER. n. f. [from tease.] Any thing that torments by incessant importunity.

A fly buzzing at his ear, makes him deaf to the best advice.
If you would have him come to himself, you must take off his little teaser, which holds his reason at bay. Collier.

TEAT. n. f. [teah, Welsh; teat, Saxon; tette, Dutch; teton, French.] The dug of a beast; anciently the pap of a woman.

Even at thy teat thou hadst thy tyranny. Shakespeare.
Shows cause a fruitful year, watering the earth better than rain; for the earth sucks it as out of the teat. Bacon.

When we perceive that bats have teats, we infer, that they suckle their younglings with milk. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

It more pleas'd my sense
Than smell of sweetest fennel, or the teats
Of ewe or goat dropping with milk at even. Milton.
Infants sleep, and are seldom awake but when hunger calls for the teat. Locke.

The goat, how bright amidst her fellow stars,
Kind Amalthea, reach'd her teat distant Prior.

With milk, thy early food. Prior.

calling the same substance sometimes the sulphur, and sometimes the mercury of a body. Locke.

TECHY. adj. Peevish; fretful; irritable; easily made angry;
froward.

I cannot come to Cressid but by Pandar,
And he is as techy to be woo'd to wooe,
As he is stubborn-chafte against all sute. Shakespeare.

When it did taste the wormwood on the nipple, and felt it bitter, pretty fool, to see it techy, and fall out with the dug. Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet.

TECTONICK. adj. [τεκτονικός.] Pertaining to building. Bailey.

To TED. v. a. [teaban, Saxon, to prepare.] To lay grafs

TEE

TE'DIOUS. adj. [tedious, Fr. tedium, Latin.]

1. Wearisome by continuance; troublesome; irksome.
That I be not further tedious unto thee, hear us of thy clemency a few words. Acts xxiv. 4.

The one intente, the other still remits,
Cannot well suite with either, but soon prove Tedious alike. Milton.

Pity only on fresh objects stays,
But with the tedious light of woes decays. Dryden.

2. Wearisome by prolixity.
They unto whom we shall seem tedious are in nowise injured by us, because it is in their own hands to spare that labour which they are not willing to endure. Hooker, b. i.

3. Slow.
Chief mastery to dissect
With long and tedious havock fabled knights. Milton.

TE'DIOUSLY. adv. [from tedious.] In such a manner as to weary.

TE'DIOUSNESS. n. f. [from tedious.]

1. Wearisomeness by continuance.
2. Wearisomeness by prolixity.

In vain we labour to persuade them, that any thing can take away the tediousness of prayer, except it be brought to the same measure and form which themselves assign. Hooker.

3. Prolixity; length.
Since brevity's the foul of wit,
And tediousness the limbs and outward flourishes,
I will be brief. Shakespeare, Hamlet.

Uneasiness; tirefulness; quality of wearying.

In those very actions whereby we are especially perfected in this life we are not able to persist; forced we are with very weariness, and that often, to interrupt them; which tediousness cannot fall into those operations that are in the state of bliss when our union with God is complete. Hooker, b. i.

More than kisses, letters mingle souls,
For thus friends absent speak: this ease controuls
The tediousness of my life. Donne.

She diffuses them all within a while;
And in the sweetest finds a tediousness. Davies.

To TEEM. v. n. [team, Saxon, offspring.]

What's the newest grief?
Each minute teems a new one. Shakespeare, Macbeth.

Common mother, thou Whose womb unmeasurable, and infinite breast, Teems and feeds all. Shakespeare, Timon of Athens.

The earth obey'd; and straight
Op'ning her fertile womb, teem'd at a birth Innumerable living creatures. Milton's Par. Lost, b. vii.

The deluge wrought such a change, that the earth did not then teem forth its increase, as formerly, of its own accord, but required culture. Woodward's Nat. Hist.

2. To pour. A low word, imagined by Skinner to come from temmen, Danish, to draw out; to pour. The Scots retain it:
as, teem that water out; hence Swift took this word.

Teem out the remainder of the ale into the tankard, and fill the gla's with small beer. Swift's Directions to the Butler.

TE'EMFUL. adj. [teampul, Saxon.]

tree: which see.

A teiltree and an oak have their substance in them when they cast their leaves. Isa. vi. 13.

TEINT. n. f. [teinte, French.] Colour; touch of the pencil.

Glazed colours have a vivacity which can never be imitated by the most brilliant colours, because the different teints are simply laid on, each in its place, one after another. Dryd.

TE'LARY. adj. [tela, a web, Lat.] Spinning webs.

The pictures of telary spiders, and their position in the web, is commonly made lateral, and regarding the horizon; although we shall commonly find it downward, and their heads respecting the center. Brown's Vulgar Err. b. v.

TELESCOPE. n. f. [telescope, Fr. telescopio and σκοπεω.] A long gla's by which distant objects are viewed.

The telescope discovers to us distant wonders in the heavens, and shows the milky way, and the bright cloudy spots, in a very dark sky, to be a collection of little stars. Watts.

TELESCOPICAL. adj. [from telescope.] Belonging to a telescope; seeing at a distance.
